CHANGING LIVES

Who is this training for?

This free training package is aimed at frontline staff and managers of services that come into contact with people with multiple and complex needs across Newcastle and Gateshead services. This is inclusive training so we would value the attendance of people who use services too.

What is Co-production?

Co-production is where people using services and the people providing those services share power and work together to design, develop or deliver improvements to services. This also involves seeing services as agents for change and seeing people who use services as assets with skills, who gain reciprocally from their contributions towards positive change.

What is covered in the training?

Our training covers an introduction to the history and theory of co-production, the key skills and our key values underlying the approach. It is a practical workshop to develop your own co-production action plan.

This training was co-produced and is co-facilitated by members of the experts by experience network. We value the inclusion of experts by experience as active participants at each session.

Our training covers an overview of the history of coproduction. We then explore the core values and principles of using this approach. Participants are invited to bring to the training an idea of an activity or area they may be interesting in applying co-production to. An interactive workshop then helps attendees to develop their own action plan.

This training includes an offer of follow up contact to reflect on how well the plan is progressing with advice and support from the facilitators.

Training is offered on a quarterly basis in Newcastle and Gateshead.
